Location

Truffles & wine, wild gorges, magnificent castles, blooming gardens, and postcard-perfect villages – the Périgord, the gourmet region in southwest France, enchants with diverse experiences. When I think of the Dordogne, I immediately recall the noble Périgord truffles, foie gras, excellent wine, and the thrilling Martin Walker crime novels. Our little hike begins in Saint Mesmin, in the impressive Auvezère Gorge. We leave the car by the church and breathe in the still, heat-filled air. Passing the cemetery, a natural path leads us into the valley, where the soothing sound of water drowns out all the noise of civilization. Time stands still here – an almost meditative connection with nature. Brantôme, the “Venice of the Périgord,” shows two faces: the historic monastery with its famous cliff cave, and lively streets full of charming shops, patisseries, brasseries, cafés, bars, and wine shops. A place where gourmets and connoisseurs spend an unforgettable holiday day.
