Location

Alhaurín el Grande lies in the Gualdelhorce Valley, just beyond the vibrant Costa del Sol. It's situated precisely between Málaga and Marbella. Nearby towns include Mijas, Benemaldena, and Torremolinos. Further afield are Ronda, Antequera, Granada, and the Caminito del Rey, ideal for a day trip. The Arabs called Alhaurín "Jardín de Ala," meaning "Ala's Garden." Later, the Catholic Monarchs added "El Grande" to distinguish it from Alhaurín de la Torre. Alhaurín is a typical Spanish village nestled in the Sierra de Mijas. With its authentic charm and approximately 27,000 inhabitants, this lively town celebrates numerous festivals: Easter processions, the Feria, Noche Blanco El Romero, Halloween, and Christmas, to name just a few. Here you'll find over 45 bars, terraces, and restaurants. There's also a social insurance clinic, a library, schools, a bus station, a weekly market, a cultural center, and a theater. A British school is located in nearby Cartama.
